

Teaching Rebellion Book Tour:

What:

Teaching Rebellion is a book of firsthand testimonies telling the story of 2006 in Oaxaca, Mexico. What began as a teacher's strike demanding more resources for education quickly turned into a massive movement that demanded participatory democracy, beyond the ballot box.

Come to this special event hosted by CASA Collective to talk with book editors and contributors, and be first in line to buy your copy!

Where: Wooden Shoe Books
508 S. 5th St. Phila

When: November 13th 7:00 PM
Thursday
Stories from the Grassroots in Oaxaca

This is a chance to listen directly to those living and driving one of the most important social uprisings of the 21st century.

For more information check-out www.casacollective.org or call

Silvia Hernandez is a sociology student who was active in the takeover and management of state media in Oaxaca during the social movement in 2006. She continues to work for alternatives to neoliberal development in Southern Mexico.

Chris Thomas spent two years collaborating with the autonomous school system in Zapatista communities in Chiapas.